cooperation to ICU pursuant to an established liaison with the Springfield RA.

(U) At that time local authorities described their investigation into the deaths of Gerrit Strydom and James Bethel under questionable circumstances. Both individuals died within hours of one another in their respective hotel rooms. According to a witness Strydom and Bethel traveled from Africa to the United States to embark on an interstate, I-66, cross-country tour via motorcycle. The same witness said both individuals completed a fishing trip to the Congo the week prior. Local authorities released hotel video, and crime scene photographs, which suggested both individuals showed signs of illness prior to their deaths.

(U) ENRC and family members hired [redacted] pathologist [redacted] who traveled from New York to conduct a forensic medical examination of the deceased. Similarly, the Center for Disease Control (CDC) traveled to Springfield to mitigate the potential for the spread of infectious disease considering the decedent's recent travel to Congo. Lastly, the local coroners office conducted their examination pursuant to local protocols. All parties declared their deaths due to contraction of the malaria virus.

ENRC chairman quits besmirched miner

By Christopher Thompson and Jonathan Guthrie

Mehmet Dalman resigned as chairman of ENRC

The chairman brought in to clean up Eurasian Natural Resources Corp resigned on Tuesday, dealing a further blow to the credibility of the controversial FTSE 100 miner.

Mehmet Dalman, who was appointed chairman with a brief to improve corporate governance and investigate whistleblower allegations of fraud, handed in his notice, effective immediately, in a board meeting.

In a release early Wednesday, the group confirmed that Gerhard Ammann, a non-executive director of ENRC and president of Bank Von Roll, a Swiss private bank, would replace Mr Dalman.

“I have a clear mandate from the board,” said Mr Ammann, who was chairman and chief executive of Deloitte in Switzerland before joining ENRC. “My role is to work [with shareholders] to draw a line under the past.”

The resignation represents a second setback this week for City financiers who had promoted a London quotation to a powerful Asian client. On Monday shares in embattled Indonesian coalminer Bumi were suspended because auditors doubted the accuracy of a subsidiary’s accounts.

Mr Dalman had earlier warned he was ready to quit over a disagreement with executives involving issues of transparency. The miner, whose main shareholders are the Kazakhstan government and Central Asian oligarchs, has been hit by a string of employee exits and investor worries over its corporate governance.

“It had become clear that as chairman [Dalman] had office and responsibility, but not power, and that situation was untenable,” said a person familiar with the situation.

It is understood that his position had become untenable as pressures on the group intensified. Last week ENRC’s controlling shareholders said they were considering removing the Kazakhstan-based business from the London market via a buyout.

In addition, ENRC announced that two directors, Sir Paul Judge and Dieter Ameling, would be stepping down at the company's annual meeting in June.

ENRC has been the subject of long-running corporate governance concerns, contributing to questions over whether some natural resources groups based in developing economies should qualify for UK listings.

Earlier this week, the FT revealed the departure of company secretary Victoria Penrice, human resources boss Tony McCarthy and Stuart Nolan, group head of reward, are the latest in a string of exits of London-based staff. Victor Hanna, head of Africa, has meanwhile taken voluntary leave of absence.

This month ENRC dismissed Alex Gaft, a senior corporate investigator understood to have been examining standards of business conduct at the group's large iron ore division. ENRC also dismissed Dechert, a US law firm it had appointed at the request of the UK's Serious Fraud Office to examine allegations of fraud.

ENRC is controlled by the three Central Asian oligarchs, Kazakhmys, another London-listed miner, and the government of Kazakhstan.

On Friday, oligarch Alexander Mashkevich said that he was considering buying out the 18 per cent free float in ENRC in consortium with the Kazakh government and two other founding shareholders, Patokh Chodiev and Alijan Ibragimov.

Separately ENRC said it had established a committee, including Sir Paul Judge, to evaluate an offer "should it be forthcoming".

The appointment of Mr Ammann will be submitted for approval at the group's annual general meeting on June 5.

ENRC shares, which have lost three-quarters of their value from their peak, closed down 0.6 per cent at 282.3p.

ENRC departures raise questions over who controls miner

By Jonathan Guthrie, Christopher Thompson and Caroline Binham

Latest twist in a tale that has seen a flurry of senior figures part ways

Mehmet Dalman resigned as chairman of ENRC

The confirmation of a criminal probe into Eurasian Natural Resources Corp is the latest twist in a corporate governance tale that has seen a flurry of senior figures parting ways with the FTSE 100 company.

At the centre of the intrigue lies the question – who is in control of the Kazakhstan-based miner?

The resignation of former chairman Mehmet Dalman provides some clues to a rift that has opened up between ENRC's board members, based at the company's Piccadilly headquarters in London, and the three founding shareholders from Central Asia.

People close to the situation say he quit in protest at ENRC's refusal to suspend Victor Hanna – Africa boss and ally of one of the founding shareholders Alexander Mashkevich.

Mr Dalman was appointed chairman in February last year with a brief to improve corporate governance and oversee an internal investigation into whistleblower allegations of fraud. His resignation on Tuesday suggested this effort had failed, though the exact reason for his departure was not disclosed.

However, the dispute between Mr Dalman, who had circumscribed executive powers, and chief executive Felix Vulis over Mr Hanna shows the board had become divided. "This was not about the suspension of one individual," says a person familiar with ENRC. "It was about who was running the company."

ENRC says it is "committed to a full and transparent investigation of its procedures and conduct".

This was not about the suspension of one individual. It was about who was running the company

Tweet this quote

It is understood that Dechert, a law firm hired at the request of the Serious Fraud Office to investigate the whistleblower allegations, raised concerns about Mr Hanna with the board in March. Dechert had produced one report on the Kazakh operation of ENRC, which mines iron ore and ferrochrome, and was preparing a second on its African businesses. Last month, Mr Dalman reviewed evidence compiled by Dechert with an independent lawyer. He then asked Mr Vulis to suspend Mr Hanna. However, on April 2 the board learnt that Mr Hanna had instead been granted the option of going on voluntary leave of absence.

“How could the board expect to be accountable [to investors] when it didn’t know what was going on?” one director says.

People close to ENRC say Mr Vulis was unhappy that Dechert had not interviewed Mr Hanna and that he questioned the US law firm’s evidence.

Pressure then mounted against Dechert within ENRC. The result was that Mr Dalman fired Dechert and replaced it with Fulcrum, another legal firm. But he was left smarting over Mr Hanna.

Mr Dalman is understood to have had reservations about continuing as chairman after last week’s announcement of a possible offer from the founding shareholders’ who, with the Kazakh government, could buy out minority shareholders and withdraw ENRC from the London market.

The SFO’s criminal probe now means the oligarchs may have to rethink these plans.

Mr Hanna was not available for comment. Mr Dalman and Dechert declined to comment.
